HR ANALYTICS

Employee Attrition Dashboard

Who leaves, and why | Built with Power BI

Project overview

1

Objective

Find the key factors behind employee attrition so HR can improve retention.

2

Dataset

HR Analytics data: 1,470 employees after cleaning, 38 columns covering demographics, pay, role and satisfaction.

3

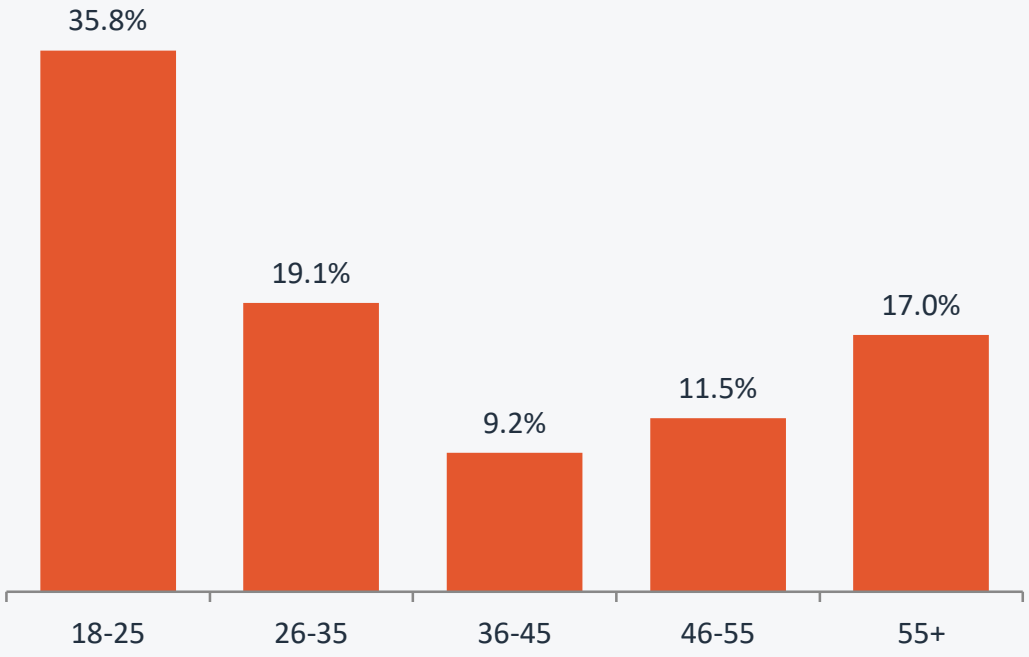

Process

Cleaned in Power Query (duplicates, nulls, data types), added Age Group and Salary Slab columns, built DAX measures and an interactive dashboard.

The headline numbers

1,470 Employees	237 Left the company	16.1% Attrition rate
37 Average age	6.5K Avg. monthly income	7.0 Avg. years at company

Young employees leave the most

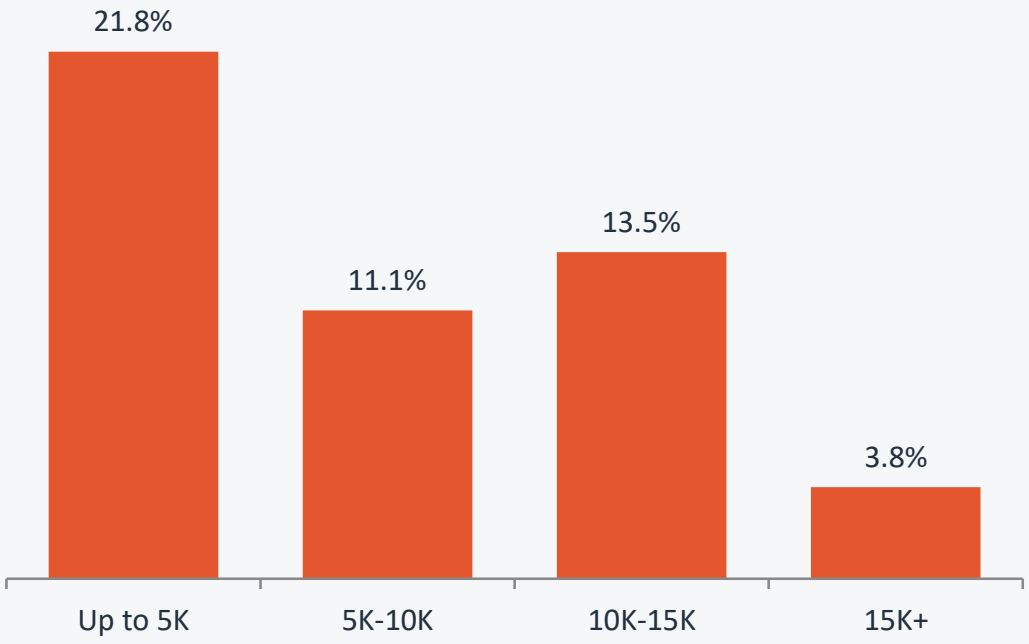

Attrition rate by age group (% of employees in each group who left)

What it shows

- 18-25: 36% leave, the highest of any age group
- 26-35 has the most leavers in number: 116 of 237
- Attrition is lowest at 36-45 (9%)

Low pay drives people out

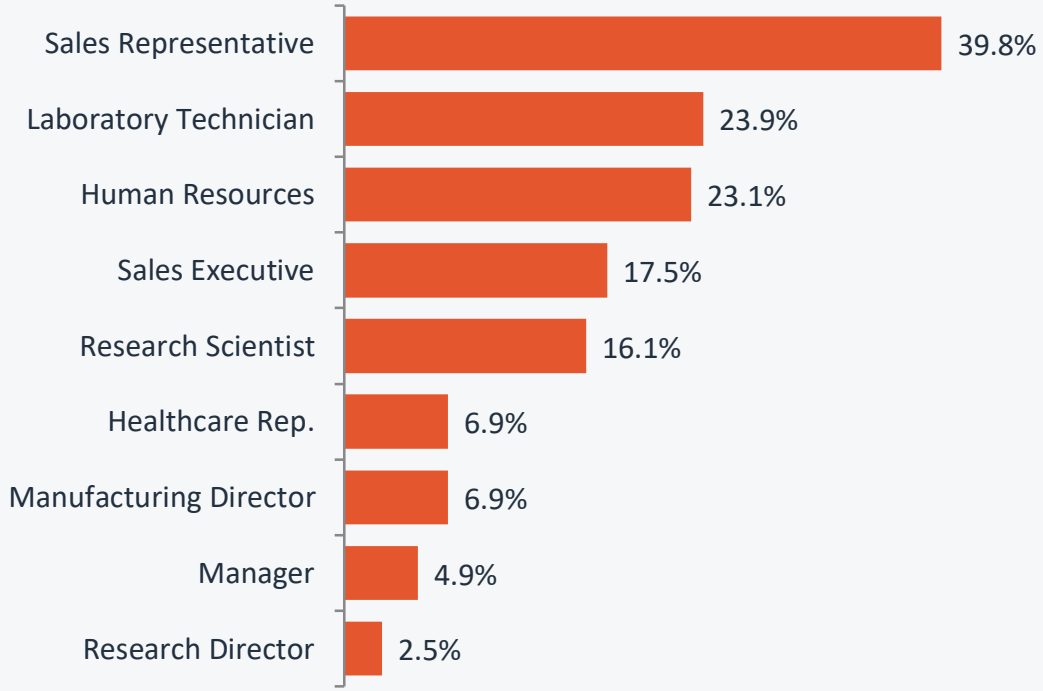

Attrition rate by monthly income slab

What it shows

- 163 of 237 leavers earn under 5K (69%)
- Attrition falls to just 3.8% above 15K
- Compensation is the strongest lever for retention

Sales Reps and Lab Technicians at risk

Attrition rate by job role

What it shows

- Sales Rep: 40% leave (33 of 83)
- Lab Technician: most leavers overall (62)
- Senior roles (Managers, Directors) stay: under 5%

Overtime, travel and marital status

Overtime

30.5%

vs 10.4% without overtime

3x higher attrition

Frequent travel

24.9%

vs 8.0% for non-travelers

Burnout risk

Single employees

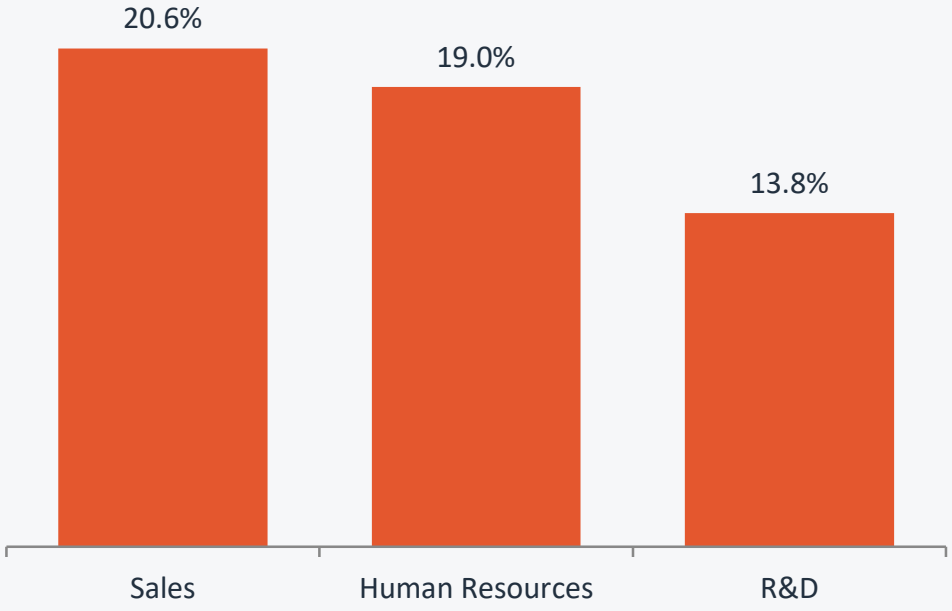

25.5%

vs 12.5% married

2x higher attrition

Attrition rate within each group

Sales has the highest attrition

Attrition rate by department

Quick facts

- Sales: 20.6% (92 of 446)
- HR: 19.0% (12 of 63)
- R&D: 13.8%, but the most leavers (133) due to size
- Male 17.0% vs Female 14.8%

What HR should do next

1

Review pay for entry-level roles

Under-5K earners are 69% of leavers.

2

Cut overtime and frequent travel

Overtime triples attrition risk.

3

Focus on 18-35 year olds

Mentoring, growth paths and early promotion.

4

Target Sales Rep and Lab Tech teams

Highest-risk roles need retention plans.